

Hi, Garrett Pierson here, from 106 Success Factors.com. I want to share with you a success factor that has truly been a very important piece of my life, and that is speed. Successful people are fast at implementing those desires of their hearts. The quote for the day is my Jeff Mallet. Jeff Mallet says, "Mock S, the speed at which stress can't keep up is simply forward motion, but it has to be self-propelled." Again, that's by Jeff Mallett.

Speed - a successful person is fast and speedy at life, business, and soul. That speed that you implement into your life will truly make a difference in your success. Let me give you an example.

I just wrote my book, What Success Takes. You can see it at www.whatsuccesstakes.com. I know some people who have gone to school to write books, who still, after many years, have not written a book. I did not go to school to write a book; in fact, I'm terrible at English. English was my worst subject, but I implemented speed. I wrote my book, What Success Takes, in three months, from start to finish, including building my website to promote it, getting joint venture partners to promote it, putting an audio CD together; again, I give my audio CD away for free. All of this was done within three months. I did that because I knew if I didn't take action today, and really implement speed into my business and my life, I would not be successful. Again, that's my opinion.

All of these 106 Success Factors have a little bit of my insight, but you implement speed into your life the way it helps you the most. Again, today's success factor is "speed." If you're watching this on any place other than www.106successfactors.com, go over there. There is a link below, www.106successfactors.com; opt-in with your name and email address on the page, and I will send you all of my 106 Success Factors, over the next year. Have a wonderful day everybody.
